

World War One Centenary : Continuations and Beginnings \(University of Oxford / JISC\)

The Sandwich that Sabotaged Civilisation

by Paul Miller

2013-01-22 14:27:20

Presented by Dr Paul Miller, Marie Curie Fellow at the University of Birmingham (UK) and Associate Professor of History at McDaniel College (US), this video and audio podcast explores how a well known photograph and an infamous lunch break have shaped our memory of the Sarajevo assassination. He contests the tension between history and memory and explores how what we think we see shapes what we think about the past

Watch and download the podcast at: <http://podcasts.ox.ac.uk/sandwich-sabotaged-civilisation-video>.

This podcast is part of the series First World War: New Perspectives available on Oxford Podcasts: <http://podcasts.ox.ac.uk/series/first-world-war-new-perspectives>.

You can download the image discussed from Wikipedia: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/File:Gavrilo_Princip_captured_in_Sarajevo_1914.jpg (Public Domain) and read more about Gavrilo Princip on the Wikipedia article: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gavrilo_Princip.

Licensed as Creative Commons CC-BY-NC-SA

Original version