

All Quiet on the Wikipedia Front?

by Pat Lockley

2012-03-21 12:07:36

Wikipedia is in a position of influence for how people learn about history, but how do the Battles of Arras (1914, 1917 and 1918) differ across the site? What do the edits and page changes tell us about these battles and how different countries see them differently?

The English 1917 page dominates on edits and editors

However the longest 1917 page isn't in English, and more languages have a page for the 1918 battle - some of whom (TA = Tamil) have never made an entry before.

More visualisations:

All Edits \(no English\)

All Edits \(1914\)

All Edits \(1917\)

All Edits \(1918\)

Document length \(grouped by battle\)

The Excel Sheets used to make these graphs

All of these statistics are from April 2 2012.

Licensed as Creative Commons CC-BY-NC-SA

Original version